TOM SNYDER: We have -- I say we -- the people of this country have a new Director of the CIA in the person of Mr. George Bush. The CIA continues as a topic of major conversation; books are being written about it, newspaper articles, television accounts carried every day about the practices of the CIA, about the investigations or observances of various committees of the House and the Senate. And tonight we have with us some gentlemen who have a direct involvement with the CIA, both past and present. And let me start with Mr. Harry Rositzke, who was on this program just about a year ago now, I believe. He will have a book coming out next year on the CIA. He was a station chief for five years and can tell us what the function of a station chief was and can possibly also give us his assessment of Mr. George Bush, who was the former Chairman of the Republican Party, as the new Director of the CIA.

Mr. Winslow Peck was a former intelligence analyst for NSA. This is the National Security Agency. He is presently a co-editor of a journal called Counter-Spy. This published four times a year in Washington by the organizing committee for a group called the Fifth Estate. And I trust that you'll fill us in on that, Mr. Peck.

Mike Ackerman was employed by the CIA for a period of 11 years as a case officer. During those 11 years he served this country in 20 different nations around the world, and during 1968 and '69 worked on assignment with Dick Welch, the CIA station chief in Athens who was assassinated in Greece recently. They were very good friends.

And Mr. Tim Butz, who is a co-editor of Counter-Spy, a Vietnam veteran who was a student at Kent State in 1970, when the
